

My practice in Denmark is very fun; for example;

- Transportation
 - The flight time from Thailand to Denmark is 11 hours
 - Train from Copenhagen to Aalborg, 7 hours (Nearly lost the tract but fortunately that a Danish people who had ever stayed in Thailand helped me!!)
 - Walking from the dormitory to the hospital for 20 minutes with the outside temperature of 0 degree, good scenery
- Dormitory
 - Not so big, for one person but it's cozy
 - With shared kitchen and bathroom
 - Above of all, Wi-Fi is provided and I met many friends from various countries during cooking time
- Weather and scenery
 - Very cold
 - Amazingly beautiful roads because it was nearly Christmas time

- Clinical practice

- I had to go to clothing room every day to take a physical therapist's uniform, blue or green shirt and white trousers (great). I changed my cloth every morning and took off in the evening sending to hospital's laundry, I didn't need to wash it by myself
- Danish instructors and friends are very nice
- Case discussion every morning before clinical practice, presenting their own cases, sharing ideas and comments
- Instructors observed me during treating patients, and then gave me a feedback after patients went home.
- There's a Danish physical therapist who could speak Thai!!!
- Most of patients couldn't speak English well, so I need Danish physical therapist as an interpreter.
- Had a clinical experience that I have never studied at my faculty, and participated a lot of activities
